Seven battalions of Massachusetts militiamen marched through the streets of this city today, en route for Framingham in response to President Wilson's mobilization order.

Promptly at noon the troops, comprising units from the Fifth, Eighth and Ninth regiments, got under way at the North Station and, passing through streets packed with cheering humanity, paraded to the South Station, where they entrained.

The thousands of persons along the parade route were thrilled by the report that the Massachusetts troops might be among the first to go to the border, and the demonstration equalled in patriotic intensity that of 1914 when the volunteers marched away to battle in Cuba.

REVIEWED BY MAYOR

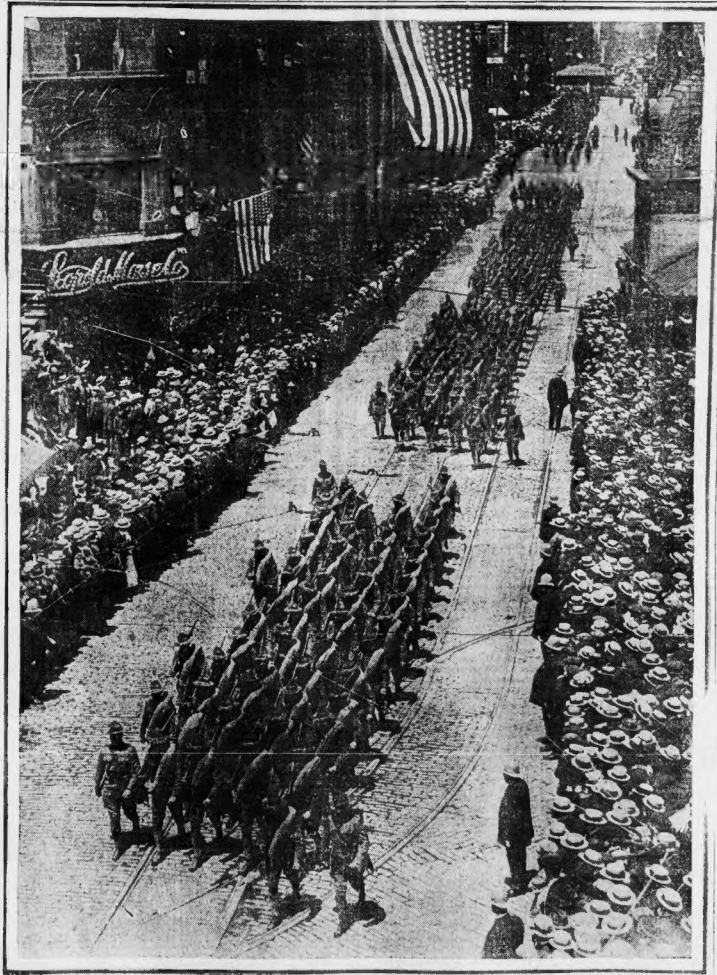

The parade was reviewed at City Hall by Mayor Curley, city officials and U. S. A. veterans, and at the State House by Adjutant-General Cole and members of the Governor's Council.

In accordance with Mayor Curley's proclamation, buildings along the route were decorated with flags and bunting, and a large sign was spread across the front of City Hall bearing the inscription: "God Bless Our Country's Defenders."

The parade, in command of Brigadier-General E. L. Terry, was headed by the "Fighting Ninth," with Colonel Edward L. Logan in the lead. Then came companies from the Eleventh Regiment, commanded by Colonel Frank A. Graves, who returned from Canada yesterday, and the detachments of the Fifth, Colonel Willie W. Stever, brought up the rear.

To the music of regimental bands the line swung up Canal street to Washington and into School street, where reviewing stands had been erected in front of City Hall. Dr. Arthur Band had just finished a concert when

SEND WARSHIPS TO MEXICAN WATERS

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, June 21.—The forces of the army any navy were being distributed today to wedge all Mexico in an iron grip should hostilities be forced by the de facto government.

Practically every destroyer on the active list of the navy was under waiting orders. Supplies and munitions were on board and steam was up ready at signal to throw a line of war craft along both coasts of Mexico and effectively blockade every port of the republic.

The first destroyer division of the Pacific fleet was ordered to steam south from San Diego today to take positions selected by Admiral Winslow where it can be given immediate assistance and the craft held in readiness for stern work should it become necessary.

All light-draft gunboats were also in readiness for blockading duty. The administration is determined that its embargo on all munitions and machinery for their manufacture shall be made absolute unless there is an immediate change in the attitude of the Carranza government.

Also, while the naval forces were being lined up, every effort was being made by the War Department to hurry the mobilization of the militia.

U. S. RECALLS TROOPS

Major-General Funston's demand for some 15,000 National Guardsmen to strengthen his border force, will be granted as quickly as possible, and if possible the first units sent forward will be cavalry, a branch very badly needed on the border.

As indicating the seriousness with which he views the situation, Secretary of War Baker today said that he now was considering graduating the 1917 class at the Military Academy immediately, a year ahead of time, in order to fill up gaps in the officers needed.

Secretary Baker said that this action has not been fully decided on, but that it very probably will be ordered.

No word has yet reached the department as to the position Carranza has taken on the American note, only the brief statement that the note has reached Mexico City has been received.

MRS. ASTOR HAS REHEARSAL OF WEDDING

Blue Harbor, Me., June 21. — Just before the first evening a heavy gray touring car whirled down Mount Desert and halted by the picture house. A young man and a young woman stepped out. The young man in light business suit and straw hat leaped out and assisted a tall, blue-eyed woman to alight. The woman, who was wearing a light blue dress, turned toward the dim pinpoints of light in the distance. The young man and William Kirk Dick were holding an "informal rehearsal" for their wedding at 2 o'clock. The young woman, who seemed very young, and very happy, and very much absorbed in each other.

GERMANS RUSH MORE TROOPS TO HELP ARMY NOW IN RUSSIA

Petrograd, June 21.—German reinforcements are pouring into Volynia and Galicia in an effort to save the Austro-Hungarian army and check the Russian advance.

Hard fighting is extending all along the front with part of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's group of armies engaged north of the Poles.

Partisan battles are still raging in the Polesia front northwest of Luck, where the Germans are striving to prevent the Russians from driving a wedge between the armies of General von Litzow and von Huttenlofer and to check the drive on Vladimir Volynia, the northern rail way to Lemberg, the Galician capital.

RUSSIAN CONTROL BELIEVED.
It is confidently reported that the Russians are now in control of Belov.

Kozelma is a strongly fortified city in Galicia, 15 miles northwest of Kovel. It lies on the Pruth river and is the center of network of strategic routes. The main railway line running through Galicia, from Lemberg to Czernowitz passes through Kozelma.

The army of General von Pfanner, which fled from Czernowitz when the Russians entered the city, is in retreat. The city is now in the hands of the Russian army of General Litzow.

The Austro-Hungarian army is in a desperate struggle to prevent the Russian advance. The Russian army is now in control of Belov.

TRUCKS SHIELDED BY RUSSIAN.
The Russian army is advancing upon Lemberg by the way of the Rovno Lemberg railway. It is shelling the Austro-Hungarian positions at Brody and the rail of the town is believed to be in the hands of the Russians.

General von Pfanner, the Russian Minister of War, states that the Austro-Hungarian and German have lost nearly 50,000 men in the past three weeks in prisoner alone, not counting the many hundreds who fell in battle.

WAR SUMMARY

While the Russians claim continued gains along the eastern front, admission is made in official statements from Petrograd that the Germans are offering stubborn resistance along the Strypa River. Unofficial dispatches from Petrograd admit that the Austrians, aided by German reinforcements, have succeeded in checking the Russian drive between Lutsk and Kovel, where General Brusilov is trying to cut Austrian communications between Kovel and Lemberg.

The German official statement goes further than this, however, saying that Russian resistance between the Kovel-Lutsk railroad and the Tatra River broke down after severe fighting and that the German-Austrian troops were fighting their way forward.

Between these contradictory reports it is evident that German-Austrian efforts are being exerted to the utmost to protect Lemberg.

The Russian advance through the Austrian crown land of Bukovina continues. Petrograd says in its official statement that the Austrians are retreating in disorder, that the Russians have crossed the Sereth River, north of Czernowicz, and now occupy three towns.

General von Pfanner's army, which evacuated Czernowicz, is described as being in rout, with the Russians now dominating practically the crown land.

The situation at Verdun is practically unchanged and the Italians and Austrians are exchanging attacks without marked gains for either.

THE BEST THING FOR DYSPEPSIA

WHY PEPIN, PANCREATIN, ETC., DO NOT PREVENT DYSPEPSIA.

An international scientific survey of the stomach trouble has been made, and it is found that the average case of stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., is due to the stomach, killing the pain with opiate, or by the use of artificial aids to digestion such as pepsin and pancreatin, and that the only way to secure permanent relief is to get rid of the cause, i.e., to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation.

The purpose of this survey was to determine the cause of stomach trouble, and it is found that the average case of stomach trouble is due to the stomach, killing the pain with opiate, or by the use of artificial aids to digestion such as pepsin and pancreatin, and that the only way to secure permanent relief is to get rid of the cause, i.e., to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation.

The sentence was suspended for six months.

Although the defendant could not identify him, he was convicted on a written statement which he made to the police following his arrest. It was alleged that he made disparaging remarks about the flag and assaulted the policemen when they removed him from the scene.

Frank Luciano, North End banker, took the witness stand in the Criminal Court today and told the story of the shooting of Eusebio Covino, whom he is charged with having killed on February 14 last, and for which he is being tried before Judge Hays on an indictment charging first degree murder. Luciano said Covino was accidentally shot as he revolved a revolver in his hand.

He had the revolver in his pocket to scare any person that might attempt to hold him up, he said, as he was in his pocket. Covino was shot in the back.

ROLL CALL

of White Trucks

In the Service of Big Fleet Owners

Year after Year

NOTE who these truck owners are and then observe how their fleets of White Trucks grow year after year. There is no truck roll call in America like it. It includes owners who stand for the highest efficiency in business and who purchase their trucks, as they purchase every other operating unit, on the basis of actual performance expressed in terms of low eventual cost.

Fleet owners and the number of White Trucks in their service each year. The last column includes only the first four months of 1916.

Sterling Ale
The crisp, clean flavor of Sterling is all its own.

LESS generous use of hops would lose that tonic tang which judges of fine ales look for. Less careful choosing, less skilful blending, might well yield that unpleasant bitter from which Sterling is always free.

It is the flavor of "know how." Test it for yourself.

Red Sox After the Game Need Good Pitching

By HERMAN NICKERSON.
The World's Champions are out today to win a game from those hard hitting, volume Yankees. The men of Carlin's crew didn't display much life in their opening encounter, being stopped for seven innings, starting their rally at a bit too late.

The Yankees seem because they could hit and get plenty of those things. The Red Sox, on the other hand, were hit by a double play, which meant that the Sox were out of the game. The Sox, however, were not out of the game. The Sox, however, were not out of the game. The Sox, however, were not out of the game.

LONDON SHRUNK

$35, $40, $45, $50 SUITINGS

I buy out the entire stock of Geo. W. Brown, woollens, Skinner's silk and satin, Belgian canvas, fine linings, etc., who has been located for the last thirty years in the Studio Building, 110 Tremont St., Boston. This stock of woollens comprises a choice line of goods, with as great a variety, as any tailor in Boston could boast of. Mr. Brown was a keen business man, and, if his woollens are any criterion, a man of great cloth intelligence.

The great bulk of this stock was purchased through the commission house of William B. Leonard, whose cloths can be found in no tailor's shop who sells goods under $35 for a suit, and I offer you a range of woollens with the original William B. Leonard tickets on them, at a price,

Three-Piece $15.50
SUIT to Order

These cloths were never put in a suit by Mr. Brown to sell under $35, and from that up to $80. I offer you the original tickets of Macular Parker Co., Boston's greatest wholesale woollen concern; the original tickets of Lippincott, Johnson & Co., Milbourn, Leamon & Co., Fifth Avenue's large commission house; Wain, Shiel & Son, a London concern, and other houses of similar character.

This stock is mostly confined styles, nearly all Boston Shrink, and of a quality that no man can question for color. It comprises a variety of merchandise that is never used in suits to sell under $35-$40-$45-$50, and I today advertise them and advise my old customers to get in early on the purchase so they can pick out as many styles as they choose.

Three-Piece $15.50
SUIT to Order

From what information I can gather, Mr. Brown did not intend to retire at this season, and I am given to understand that most of the heavyweights in this range are next Fall's goods. There are no crazy patterns, everything clean staple cloth, Blue, Navy, Blue, Grey, Unfinished Woollens, neat, quiet, Sherkline weaves, Tartan Plaids, Tartan Checks, and a general variety of everything that would constitute a merchant tailor's stock.

If you were a tailor it would be hardly possible for you to get the suit pattern for the price I am charging for a suit made to order or new suit made. I will line these goods with a fine alpaca lining, they will be out under the eye of the highest skilled designer, custom clothing in the country today, made by union hand, under union conditions, in sanitary shops.

I would be pleased to have every reader of this paper call and get sample for inspection.

The Struggles of a Wife

Myra Looks So Ill That the Doctor Is Seriously Alarmed

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLIX

Myra looked so ill that the doctor was seriously alarmed. He had called on her several times during the last few days, and each time he had found her looking more and more exhausted. He had prescribed various remedies, but she had not improved. He had even suggested that she should go to the country for a few weeks, but she had refused. She was too weak to travel. He had now decided to call on her again, and this time he was determined to see her. Chinese boys and girls play a great many games, some of which are the same as ours, but mostly they are very different. The games of the Chinese children are very interesting and varied. Household Suggestions

Instead of destroying the enamel of saucers by scrubbing with gritty substances, try the plan of bolting in them, how old stain, water mixed with a little chloride of lime. It almost immediately restores the enamel to its original whiteness to a condition of snowy whiteness.

The AMERICAN Desires Above All Things to Be Fair

THE AMERICAN publishes in this column a letter from the publicity manager of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in reply to an editorial recently published in the AMERICAN concerning the war tax on telephone calls. The letter is as follows:

Dear Sir:

Your editorial headed "For a First-Class Joke Study the Working of the United States Tax on Telephone Messages," printed in the AMERICAN on June 14, is based on a series of misconceptions, as far as the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company is concerned. I will not attempt to quote the entire editorial, because of its length. Briefly summarized, you insinuate that the telephone companies do not honestly try to collect the one-cent tax on each telephone call, the charge for which is 15 cents or more, and that no effort is made to collect the cent until after the caller has finished speaking.

You further intimate that it was the intent of the law that this tax should be laid on the telephone companies, and that the companies transferred the burden to the telephone user. This is not the fact. The law clearly provides that every telephone company shall make a return of the number of messages for which a charge of 15 cents or more was imposed, "and for each of such messages or conversations the said person, firm or corporation shall collect from the person paying for the message or conversation a tax of one cent, in addition to the regular charges for the message or conversation, which tax the said person, firm or corporation shall, in turn, pay to the said collector of internal revenue of their respective district."

When a telephone user makes a call the initial rate for which is 15 cents or more, the operator asks for the deposit of the initial charge and then says, "Please drop the one-cent federal tax in the quarter slot." All this occurs before the caller begins his talk and not afterwards. The exception to this rule is when a caller, urgently needing an immediate connection and not having a penny with him, is allowed to complete the call when we have reason to believe he will make the one-cent deposit immediately he has finished his conversation.

Your intimation that we do not observe both the letter and the spirit of the law is unjust, and your insinuation that there is a discrepancy between the number of telephone messages properly subject to tax under the law and the number of pennies returned by us is unworthy of you. The internal revenue department is in a position to give the fullest assurance on this score.

Yours truly,

THOMAS J. FEEHEY, Publicity Manager.

If the editorial was open to the construction that the law intended the Telephone Company and not the user to pay the telephone tax, then the AMERICAN stands corrected by Mr. Feehey, for he is plainly right in his interpretation of the intent of the law.

The AMERICAN, however, meant to show by this tax that all taxes from corporations are paid by those who use their service and not by the corporations themselves. The income tax and the inheritance tax are, so far as we know, the only taxes that those who are best able to pay taxes find it difficult to shoulder off on the public at large. Every other tax is shifted over upon the shoulders of the consumer.

The AMERICAN invites the Telephone Company and every other company that is grieved by any apparent injustice to them by an AMERICAN editorial to make known its grievance after the example of Mr. Feehey's communication. This newspaper stands always ready to acknowledge an error and to redress a grievance.

A Serious Matter

DISTRICT ATTORNEY PELLETIER and Mayor Curley are entitled to great credit for the vigorous investigation of the arson conspiracy in this community.

Arson is one of the worst in the catalogue of crimes. The most vigorous action, consistent with the safeguarding of innocence, is necessary against the conspiracy of burning our buildings which the evidence appears to have disclosed.

Let no one who is innocent be punished, but let no one who is guilty escape.

Once-Overs

There you noticed that the woman in your neighborhood who does the most gossiping and has the most to say against the children of your section and the man in whose house about her conduct their house, as the woman children are the terrors of the ward, while her work at home is usually neglected or has to be done by some other member of the family?

Home and children cared for properly as they should be will not permit a wife and mother to spend any time in the homes of her neighbors spreading gossip.

It takes several hours each week to collect the material needed by a gossip to meet her desires. Also it takes time to peddle it.

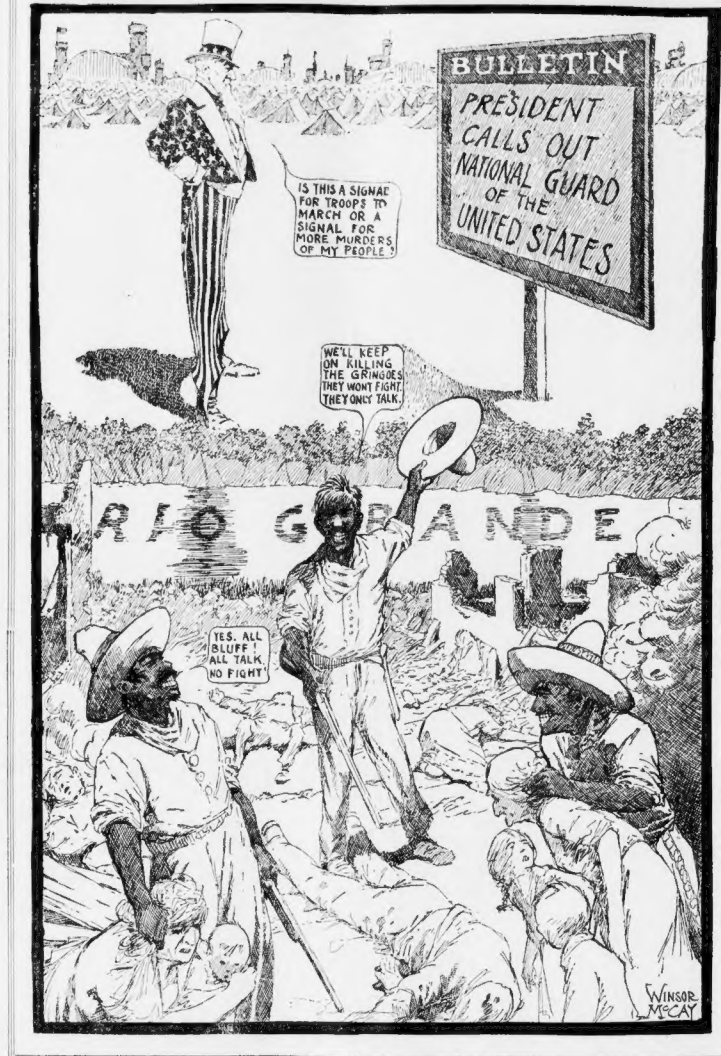

There is as much in the home life of the best of us which might be colored a bit and made over into choice morsels for the scandal bazaar that it is better any of us to complain about a neighbor.

The "gossip" is a dangerous person in the neighborhood, because the truth seldom sustains sufficient material to make her stories worth while, and to make the stories interesting, too much imagination figures as truth.

A scandal started in a name which is famous by every wind that blows and the end thereof cannot be calculated.

Taking Tonics

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

TONICS are the oldest medicines on earth, and with the most popular. "Age cannot wither them, nor custom stale their infinite variety" of bitterness. In primitive times the woods were literally full of them, for all that was needed to give a root or an herb a start and a reputation in advance was a bitter taste.

Indeed, we need not go very far back to reach that stage, for in the household medicine of our remote country districts today, almost every herb or root that has a clean, bitter taste, and is not either absolutely nauseating or poisonous, has a reputation as a remedy in some disease—headache, colic, mumps, gonorrhea, wild cherry bark, prickly ash bark, blood root, golden seal, poke root and "yarrow bark" of horrible potency.

Every wise woman and mother in Israel has a whole battery of them in reserve, guaranteed to cure after the fashion of the famous specific of the dear old lady to one of Prince Stuckton's inflexible aristocrats. No matter what was wrong with the patient, within twenty minutes after he had taken one dose he did not know there was anything the matter with him except a bitter taste in his mouth.

Just what was the origin of this singular instinct for the bitter is still a puzzle. In part, it is undoubtedly the sharp and clear effect produced certainly a change for the better, perhaps a change for the better, and of course, any improvement that might follow was credited to the medicine. Partly from the quaint old denunciation of disease, with the idea of making it as uncomfortable as possible for the spirit which had taken possession of the body.

But whatever its origin, it led to some interesting and important practical results, and that is the discovery of some of our most active and widely-used medicines, most of which are not to be found at all. One fiercely bitter-tasting bark, chewed by the Indians of Peru as a tonic, turned out to contain quinine, the sovereign and even to this day almost the only specific against malaria. A bitter and prickly leaf chewed by the natives of South America was found to have wonderfully exhilarating effects, and out of it finally came the good servant, as a local anesthetic, but had master, as a "dope" medicine. A bitter gum from Africa called alone, grew into a world-wide reputation as a powerful purgative, rivalled only by the pungent buckthorn bark and cascara, both simple bitters to begin with. While the latter cummerbund yielded caliche, well but unpleasantly known as one of the main ingredients in the historic "Compound Cathartic Pill" of the Pharmacopoeia. Another "bark" bark of Oriental origin became a tonic, the laxative of every home medicine chest.

Most faithful of all, the clinically bitter milky juice that oozes out of a cut in a green poppy-head turned out to be opium, the greatest and most mercurial of pain relievers and the terrible scourge of the dreamer of pipe dreams.

In fact it would hardly be too much to say that much of the progress of medicine, upon the drug and curative side, has been a process of testing out remedies believed to be "strengthening," to "build you up," to make you feel better, and discovering that one after another they were either laxatives or narcotics or fever reducers, or else had no curative effect at all. Which has brought us, in the day of grace and enlightenment, to the interesting position that we have practically no such drug left as a tonic, in the popular and primitive sense of the term. That is to say, there is no drug which in itself adds any strength to the body, adds any health to the body, and very few which improve the appetite. Yet we are taking tonics by the gallon and the barrel. What's the answer?

One reason for this extraordinary discrepancy between our belief and the facts in the case is that, fortunately, many tonic-takers nowadays are getting shrewd enough to have two strings to their bow, or he gives two if they consult a physician. Very often now a tonic prescription is simply a mild laxative or intestinal antispasmodic or a digestive and appetizer, which is given to the patient because he insists upon having something to take out of a bottle in a spoon. While under cover of this remedy he is also given good hygienic advice as to his diet, his exercise, his hours of work and sleep.

For the purpose of getting the good out of his medicine the patient is willing to submit to a number of troublesome and inconvenient changes in his habits, which he would bitterly resent and probably fall altogether to carry out unless he had this medicine hope to build and stimulate him.

Great Mysteries of Nature and Science

Why the Moon Often Looks Like a Giant Wheel of Fire on the Horizon, and Many Times Larger Than When Seen Overhead, Although It Is Really Farther Away

By Garrett P. Serviss

WHAT causes the visual size of the moon to seem larger when it is directly overhead? A claim that refraction of the rays of light has something to do with it. I claim that the visual size is no larger when near the horizon than when overhead, but that we are deluded into thinking so because the moon when near the horizon seems farther away and therefore should look smaller than when overhead and ostensibly nearer, so that when we see it as large as when overhead we are deluded into thinking it larger.—H. G. B.

Ordinary refraction is not the cause of the illusion, for that really diminishes the apparent size of the moon on the horizon by decreasing the vertical diameter of its disk without affecting the horizontal diameter. Thus it is distorted into an oval of smaller area than a circle of equal (maximum) diameter.

There is another cause which also diminishes, slightly, the size of the moon seen on the horizon, and that is that the moon is then actually farther from the observer than when overhead. The increase in distance is about 4,000 miles (half the earth's diameter), and this is one-sixteenth of the moon's mean distance from the earth, sufficient to produce an easily measurable diminution of angular diameter.

Yet, in spite of these two causes tending to diminish the apparent size of the moon on the horizon, it looks notably larger when in that position than when overhead. The most probable explanation is that when we see an object on the horizon we instinctively compare its size with the length of as much of the horizon as the eye takes in at one vision.

This length does not, on the average, exceed one-twelfth of the entire circle of the horizon—or, say, thirty degrees of angular measure. The angular diameter of the moon is about half a degree, so that it spans one-sixteenth of the part of the horizon clearly perceived by the eye.

But when the moon is overhead we no longer compare it with a length, but rather with an area (the area of the surrounding sky), and as the eye again takes in a space thirty degrees across, the area of that space is more than 700 square degrees, while the area of the moon's disk is only about one 2,500th of the area of the circle of sky which the eye perceives.

round it. If we give a larger estimate to the breadth of the eye-view we shall have a similar relative result. Of course the apparent increase of the moon's size on the horizon is not in the ratio of 2,500 to 40 (the eye is not deceived to that extent), but may be in the ratio of five or six to one.

In fact, the apparent size of the moon on the horizon varies greatly at different times, and probably as seen by different persons. Some of these variations may be subjective—i. e., caused by differences of impression on the mind.

Occasionally the setting moon, or sun—for the sun is affected in the same way—appears gigantic, a monstrous circle of red fire, causing real alarm in the minds of ignorant onlookers as well as more or less perplexity to those who understand the general rationale of the phenomenon. There have been instances in which such occurrences have led to false fire alarms, and others in which panicky feelings of dread and superstition have been spread through a community. In these abnormal cases refraction may play a part which cannot be ascribed to it under ordinary circumstances.

Ordinary refraction, as already said, does not increase the horizontal diameter of objects near the horizon. But it is well known that portions of the atmosphere some experience changes of refractive index, due to unusual contrasts of temperature and barometrical pressure, whereby they are virtually transformed into enormous lenses or magnifying mirrors, which produce the most extraordinary optical effects and illusions.

I have recently described some of these in writing of wonderful mirages. In such phenomena there is not only an apparent displacement of objects which brings things into sight that would otherwise be concealed behind hills or below the sea-horizon, but often, also a magnification, making really distant objects loom as if they had suddenly been brought nearer to the observer.

It is no wonder that before scientific investigation had discovered the causes of these marvelous appearances they were everywhere the source of superstitious beliefs in demonic powers inhabiting the air, the earth and the sky, and playing at their will with the forces and facts of nature. Yet the explanation of many of them is not clear, but enough is known to assure us that there is none which does not obey some discoverable law of nature.

Knighthood

By William F. Kirk

THE rare old days, the fair old days
When knighthood was in flower;
They had no moving picture plays,
No sixty miles an hour.
They had no bright electric light,
No coal electric fans;
No motor cars, no baseball stars,
No flats, no moving vans.

THE hale old days, the stale old days
When knighthood ruled the roost;
With one long fight from morn till night,
All knocks and not a boost!
Each mortal crawled or slept or sprawled
As lazy as a lizard,
Save when some knight by duty called
Would pierce a brother's gizzard.

THE breezy days, the wheezy days
When knighthood was the caper;
No water power, no bath with shower,
No thrilling morning paper.
Give me the Present's cheery ease
In which to live my hour,
And you can have the good old days
When knighthood was in flower.
